An Anarchist's Confession. Henry Guy Carlston has written a humorous article to the New York World entitled "An Anarchist's Confession," from which the following paragraphs are extracted:

"What I want to do is to give my views an airing, but I may say right here that if all of us anarchists aired ourselves as often as we air our views there would be less danger of Asiatic choicea in this city. Notorie-ty is all we have to live upon, and lately most of us have been getting pretty thin.

"Before beginning this explanation of its principles I wish to observe that anarchy is 5 10 principles I wish to observe that narroy is 6 25 very difficult to understand. We do not understand it ourselves, and while this fact 10 24 enables us to talk a great deal without saying much, it complicates the issue of a dis-

"We are opposed to capital. It galls us to think how much beer Jay Gould could frink if he chose to spend his catire income hat way. Iestead, however, of this noble and philosophical pursuit, he hoards his means and lies awake nights wondering which young telegraph company will be fat enough to kill next.

"The only way to abolish capital is for the bondholders to pool their property and give it to us. They would then be anarchists, and we, having worked anarchy for all give it to us. They would then be anarchited, and we, having worked anarchy for all she is worth, would be enabled to retire and expose the hellow fraud.

"We are opposed to spelling-books and soap Educate an anarchist and you enfeable his constitution; wash him, and he dies. Soap is not a natural product, hence nature did not contemplate its use. Abolish soap and every man becomes abonce a holder of the soil, exactly as that great man, Mr. Henry George has so beautifully elucidated.

"Education is a dengerous thing. It often tempts a name to try to surn his own living and be of some use to the community. The moment a man becomes a wage-earner he perceives that beer and bunkum are obstructed to the success and he is not so anxious for riot and pillage, for he sees that wantever destroys or hampers capital must necessarily injure the workman to whom it furnishes employment. This pernicious knowledge will wean him from our ranks to whatever destroys or hampers capital must recessarily injure the workman to whom it farnishes employment. This pernicious knowledge will ween him from our ranks to those of workingmen who seek only their just rights, and seek them by honorable and legitimate means.

"We believe in stirring up others to action, but we hold it as a sacred creed that the shockhooting begins we are better off the commissioner of said court, appointed for the purpose by said decree, shall, on the 22d DAY OF OCTOBER, 1887, at home under the bed or up a chimney. Nothing impairs a man's usefulness more than gotting shot. An anarchist full of bullet hoies and leaking sour beer at every pore is unfit to expound our principles. Our holy mission is to lurk in salcons, watch and wait until some great public disturbance occurs, leap to the front with red flags, dynamics and strong language, fan the flames of passion to a rearing hell of fury, direct the onslaught of the irrational mobto slaughter and pillage, swell its ranks with all tramps and thieves, cutthroats and outand tourderous designs, and then, when the armed resistance appears and the carnage begins, nimbly and somewhat thoughtfully skip to the rear.

"We wish it distinctly to be understood that we are not in the smallest way allied to the working men's cause. Work is a neisance and a gall to the nerves. It is en-tirely dissociated from the holy cause of too well. Really, we are in hard lines now, and unless beer goes down or the republic goes up some of us will be forced to quit the business and go to work and husiness and go to work, and we would rather curl up and die."
